Customer Appreciation Day at United

Team members from across our footprint recently came together to celebrate Customer Appreciation Day in a meaningful way. This day is especially important to us at United, as its roots trace back to the 1980s with the tradition known as “Tomato Day.” At the time, United was a small hometown bank serving many farmers and families with large gardens. The idea was simple: give customers a tomato plant as a small token of appreciation. When they planted it, they thought of the bank—and that connection has continued to grow ever since.

Looking Ahead

As we look ahead, our focus remains on providing as much clarity as possible throughout the transition, and we’ll continue to share updates as they become available. We plan to provide more details in June about next steps for employee mapping. In the meantime, if you have questions, please reach out to our HR team at UnitedTogether_Questions@ucbi.com. We appreciate your engagement and look forward to staying connected.
